

Julie Cudlip Whitman

Julie Cudlip Whitman We've received word of the passing of Julie Whitman, a true Michigander and wonderful friend.

Julie Cudlip Whitman, 73, resident of Grosse Pointe and Metamora for many years, died Thursday, February 23, 2012.

Dan Hales has passed on the following. We have lost one of the most decent, accomplished and talented members of the Club and of the human race – a dear friend to every one of us.

She loved life, art, horses, friends, travel, service to others, Patches, our country and the Lord. She was at home everywhere – from duck blinds to venues of influence at home and abroad.

She had a great sense of humor and was open to learning new subjects as she encountered them, having recently taken up Austrian (classical) economics and the New Testament.

She was tough in the face of any challenge and never compromised on principles she held dear. In this hour of sadness and lament, we must pause to give thanks to God for how He enriched our lives with her friendship and contributions to the Club.

The family passed on the following information:
